

"Haiti's forests have been plagued by large-scale deforestation, which has left the country with less than two percent of its original forest cover. The cloud forests of the country's southwest mountains stand as two of the last remaining pockets of environmental health in Haiti." - ouramazingplanet.com

Community Development International

INTERNATIONAL YEAR
OF FORESTS • 2011

2011 ACTIVITIES:

In recognition of the 2011 UNYF, CDI will continue to honor its commitment to environmental protection and host a series of varied social and academic events to advocate on issues of ecology and sustainability, to educate about deforestation and its repercussions, and to celebrate the world's forests.

Please stay tuned on our website and social networking pages for more information, details on our environmental protection projects to save the National Park "La Visite" in Haiti, as well as local community projects for green and responsible urban living beginning in New York, NY in March 2011.

Interested in getting involved or partnering with CDI on related programs? We have plenty of opportunities for volunteers for environmental type projects both locally and internationally and welcome collaborations with other organizations. Email us at info@cd-international.org for more information.

CONTACT US FOR MORE INFO:

PO Box 3417 New York, NY 10163 www.cd-international.org - info@cd-international.org

A nation that destroys its soils destroys itself. Forests are the lungs of our land, purifying the air and giving fresh strength to our people.

- FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT